Sailors Taken To Camp Of Refuge Within Frenchtown

CRISIS REACHED

Former Romanoff Envoys Get Upper Hand Of Vladivostok

Three ships of the Russian Volunteer Fleet in Shanghai harbor were seized by force yesterday by a detachment of the Municipal Police, commanded by Major A. Hilton-Johnson, and turned over to Mr. V. Grosse, who has held the post here of Russian Consul-General in and since the days of the Romanoffs. Ninety-odd members of the crews of the vessels were driven ashore by the police and given their choice of setting out for themselves independently or taking refuge in a camp established at Konkaza, in the French Concession, by the Russian consular officials. The sailors chose to enter the camp where they are to be provided with food and shelter by the Consul-General until the present difficulties are untangled.

SHIPS TIED UP

The ships, the Penza, Simferopol and Georgi, will lie in their berths at the Yangtszepoo dock until Mr. Grosse receives further instructions from the Russian minister at Peking and M. Feodoroff, Russian consul at Tsuruga, Japan, and said to be the self-styled managing director of the Russian Volunteer Fleet. M. Feodoroff is now at Kobe, a number of the ships having been seized in Japan.

Prior to the Russian revolution the head offices of the Russian Volunteer Fleet, an organisation in which were united both government and private interests, were located in Petrograd.

When the revolution and the subsequent fall of the Kerensky government plunged Petrograd into an era of terror and disorder the membership of the directorate went various ways. Several joined the forces that then were led by General Kornilloff, others cast their lot with General Denekin and others sought refuge at widely scattered parts of the country.

CONSTANTINOPLE CLIQUE

In the months of trial and strife, with the Bolshevist movement sweeping eastward over the whole country, certain elements of this old directorate, having been driven farther and farther southward at length again came together in Constantinople. Here cut off wholly from Russia and no longer representing any faction they have moved to revive their authority over the affairs of the Volunteer Fleet which long since had fallen into other hands, having undergone one change after another with the rapidly shifting events of the past year in Siberia.

Another of these changes came about last April when after the Japanese coup another new governing force came into being in Vladivostok, this leading to another reorganisation there of the directorate of the Russian Volunteer Fleet.

SAYS HE IS MANAGER

At this time Mr. Feodoroff, Russian Consul at Tsuruga, Japan, was agent at that port of the Russian Volunteer Fleet and, when the change of directorate at Vladivostok was announced he declared that he would not recognise its authority, proclaiming himself at the same time manager of the fleet.

In doing this he declared he was acting under authorisation of that nearly forgotten contingent of the original directorate which had come together at Constantinople. Feodoroff won some kind of official sanction in the move he made, which now is known to have the endorsement of Russian consular and ministerial officials both in China and Japan. It was then that the movements of the ships began to be hampered as they were held up both in Japan ports and here.

There were strikes on some of the ships whose crews sympathised with the Vladivostok contingent and objected to a proposal of the Constantinople board to remove

Prince Of Wales Near Death In Train Wreck

In a railway accident similar to the one here pictured H. R. H. the Prince of Wales narrowly escaped serious injury in Western Australia on Tuesday. He climbed out uninjured and joked about the disaster.

(Reuter's Service)

Bridgetown, Western Australia, July 5.—An accident occurred to the train in which the Prince of Wales was traveling. Whilst rounding a curve the two royal saloons were thrown off the line. Nobody was hurt.

London, July 6.—The Times Perth correspondent describing the accident to the Prince of Wales' train says:

"The Prince's saloon toppled over. The Prince climbed through the window, smilingly chaffing the railway authorities for providing an incident not mentioned in the program, and relieving the monotony of his task."

Chinese, In Long Protest, Tell Great Britain Why Anglo-Jap Pact Is Wrong

Full Text Of Communication Which Sir Beilby Alston Is Taking To Home Government From Representative Firms And Individuals

The accompanying memorandum, setting forth the views of prominent Chinese citizens on the subject of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, was presented by the following important organisations in Shanghai to Sir Beilby Alston on his way to London on furlough—The Educational Association of Kiangsu Province; The Shanghai City Chamber of Commerce; The Chinese Bankers' Association; The Chinese Cotton Mill Owners' Association; The Shanghai Educational Association; The Shanghai Fire Brigade Association; The Western Returned Students' Union; The World's Chinese Students' Federation; The Overseas Federation; The Chinese Christian Union; The National Association of Vocational Education of China.

FOREWORD

"This memorandum is drawn up in order to call the attention of the British Government to the rapidly-growing public sentiment in China against the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, at least in its present form.

"It is to be conceded at the outset that it is not an appropriate act for a third party to interfere when two Governments desire to enter into an alliance or to renew an existing one; but it will be the duty of the third party to register its objection if the alliance so contracted directly concerns the welfare of the third party.

"The Anglo-Japanese Alliance does concern the welfare of China; for, in section B of the preamble of the Alliance, in the text of both the 1905 and 1911 Agreements, matters affecting China's international standing and relations were specially treated.

"The Chinese people will look to their Government to take diplomatic steps to register China's objections to its renewal without consulting China.

"The present memorandum merely sets forth the views of the Chinese people, as reflected through the various organisations in whose name this statement is made.

"The question is dealt with here only in these aspects which touch upon the interests of China.

MOTIVES OF ALLIANCE

"In forming an alliance there are at least two motives to be accounted for.

"First, what are the objects to be attained?

"And, secondly, what are the antagonisms to be offset?

"The objects of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, presumably, were to protect the interests of Great Britain and Japan in the Far East, and the antagonisms were at first the power and policy of Russia and later those of Germany.

"The two motives are, in the last analysis, really only one—to combine the strength and resources of Great Britain and of Japan in order to protect their interests in the Far East, which were considered to be identical, from a common antagonism, at first Russia and later Germany.

"These motives do not exist now. Russia fought on the side of the Allies for over three years and, in spite of the Revolution, which crippled her as a fighting unit for the Allies, its menace to East Asia as an aggressive power no longer exists. She is in no position to endanger the interests of Great Britain or Japan.

"The power of Germany before the Great War was indeed most threatening. Her navy was rapidly developed, so as to challenge the British supremacy. Realising her growing strength she did not even take the trouble to conceal her policy of the conquest of the world

"What the Great War has done to Germany needs no comment. It may be said without any fear of contradiction that Germany is no more a menace to the interests of Great Britain and Japan in East Asia.

NO NEED NOW

"With the elimination of these Powers being antagonistic to the contracting Powers, the motives calling forth the Alliance are also removed.

"We therefore maintain that there is no necessity to renew the Alliance unless there should arise a new antagonism. So far as we are aware no such antagonism exists.

"The United States of America is the only Power that has the strength to be a menace to Anglo-Japanese interests in the East; but history has demonstrated America's disinterestedness in China.

"She is not likely to change overnight her traditional policy of friendship for China, her Hay doctrine of the "open door" and equal opportunities, to an aggressive attitude.

VIOLATIONS BY JAPAN

"The objects of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, as far as China is concerned, are specific and unequivocal.

"Section B of the preamble says: 'The preservation of the common interests of the Powers in China by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese Empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China.'

"Japan's actions, however, are at variance with her professions.

GERMANS MAKE MORE EXCUSES FOR FAILURE TO KEEP PLEDGES

Plead For Additional Time In Which To Execute Terms Of Treaty

LLOYD GEORGE FIRM

Premier Says Late Enemies Will Not Be Allowed To Discuss Merits

(Reuter's Service)

Spa, July 7.—The Conference met again yesterday after the arrival of Dr. Gessler, the Minister for the Reichswehr.

M. Delacroix, the Belgian Premier, presided and, in addition to a large number of technical experts, the presidents of the Inter-Allied Commissions of Control—military, naval and aeronautical—at Berlin were present.

The German delegates stated Germany's case in defense of her non-execution of the military, naval and air clauses of the treaty.

The German Government pleads that the delay has been unavoidable, on account of the economic situation of Germany.

REGARDING DEDUCTIONS

With regard to the reduction of effectives, the German Government points out the danger in which Germany stands at present and into which she would be plunged still further by freeing the men too quickly, as they would only swell the ranks of the unemployed.

The president of the conference and subsequently Mr. Lloyd George, insisted on the necessity of the German Government fixing a definite and early date for the carrying out of Germany's obligations, military, naval and aeronautical, if it wished to assure peace and to inspire confidence.

MEET ON JULY 15

The next sitting will be held on July 15, when the reply of the German delegation to the questions raised by Mr. Lloyd George will be heard.

The Conference of Ambassadors has decided to have recourse to a plebiscite to decide the attribution of the Teschen district.

M. Jules Cambon yesterday announced this decision to the Polish and Czecho-Slovak representatives.

PREMIER'S ULTIMATUM

London, July 5.—Interviewed by the Evening Standard's representative at Spa, Mr. Lloyd George emphasised that the Germans would not be permitted in any way to discuss the merits of the Peace Treaty.

They would not be allowed, he added, in any sense to treat it as a "scrap of paper," but they would be allowed to discuss the method of carrying out the Treaty.

ITALIAN DEMANDS

Brussels, July 5.—The newspaper Le Soir learns that Italy in return for acceptance of a 10 percent share of the German indemnity, has demanded occupation of the district of Heraclea, priority in the Hungarian and Bulgarian indemnities and abandonment by Great Britain of part of the debt owed to her by Italy.

(Reuter's Service)

Dayton, O., July 7.—Governor Cox gave his first public address as Democratic nominee at Middletown last night.

In the course of his speech he said, commenting on the industrial unrest in the world, that any attempt at exploiting class hatred was just as dangerous in America as Bolshevism in Europe.

He asserted that the "golden rule" worked better than bayonet and bullet; and that, in all industrial disputes, there was middle ground which must be followed in order that justice should be done.

Governor Cox added: "All those in public places must guard the freedom of the many from exploitation by the few."

JAPAN WILL NOT NEGOTIATE WITH RUSSIANS ABOUT "BUFFER STATE"

Uchida Tells Diet That Plans Are Changed; May Mean Crisis

CAUCUS IN VLADIVOSTOK

Peasant Group Meets With Socialists; Parliament Continues Sessions

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Tokio, July 8.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Uchida, in the course of a speech before the members of the Diet today, stated that Japan had no intention of seeking to establish a Buffer State in Siberia by negotiation with either of the Russian "governments," at Vladivostok or Verdhne-Udinsk.

This seems to indicate a decided change of base on the part of the Japanese Foreign Office.

Mr. Uchida stated that the two main objects of Japan's intervention in Siberia were (1) to aid the Czecho-Slovak forces there, and (2) to safeguard Japanese interests there, owing to territorial proximity.

The first object, Mr. Uchida said, had been achieved, but not the second.

(By Russia News Agency)

Vladivostok, July 3.—A meeting of the Socialist bloc and the Peasants' group of the Temporary Parliament took place yesterday. Resolutions adopted by the various political parties, concerning the establishment of a coalition cabinet on conditions as offered by the trading classes, were heard.

The communists—Menshevika and the left wing of the Social-Revolutionary party—advised that these conditions be accepted, without reservation.

Taking into consideration the existing political situation in the region, says the resolution, all seats in the cabinet but four are to be given to the trading class. Candidates for posts in the new coalition cabinet are being suggested.

FOURTH SITTING

The fourth sitting of the Parliament took place today, with all members of the Government being present.

The question of bringing together the different districts of the Far East was considered as the most important.

The Secretary of the Parliament read the resolution adopted by all political parties, recommending the election of a special committee to take necessary steps to discontinue the civil war in Eastern Siberia, and to bring together separate provinces.

WOULD CONVENE ALL

A resolution was passed in favor of convoking a conference of representatives of the various governments in the Russian Far East, namely the governments of Vladivostok, of Verdhne-udinsk, of Chita and of Blagoveschensk.

Nine members were elected to work out regulations providing for the convocation of this conference which is to start direct negotiations with all the governments and the representative bodies of the aforementioned districts.

Representatives of all political parties were elected to this Committee.

NICOLAIEVSK AGAIN

Blagoveschensk, July 3.—In its issue of June 26 the Osaka Mainichi published a report from Japanese headquarters, which is quoted as stating that some 3,000 Partisans forced their way from Nikolaievsk to the Bureya river.

China's Export Trade With America Growing

Some indication of how swiftly American trade with China is growing is to be gathered from a semi-annual report of declared exports from Shanghai to America in the half year ending June 30 that has just been issued from the American Consulate. The total value of exports in the six months was Gold $48,985,858, an increase of Gold $15,307,067 over the same period last year when the exports amounted to Gold $33,678,791.

Besides being remarkable for this increase of approximately 45 percent, a noteworthy feature in connection with the intricate tabulated document is the time of its appearance, just a week after the closing of the period covered, an achievement of the Consulate not before approached. Mr. E. S. Cunningham, the Consul-General, said yesterday in this connection that he felt that the highest commendation for the work done was due to Vice Consul Eli Taylor and his staff, who prepared the report.

RAW SILK TRADE

One exceptional item of the report, reflecting the swift changes in values in the past year, and the vagaries of the rate of exchange within the period, refers to the trade in raw silk. In the first six months of 1919 2,389,611 pounds of raw silk valued at $11,718,613 were shipped from Shanghai. In the six-months period just closed the quantity of silk shipped dropped to 1,394,613 pounds, but for the recent period the value of the shipments mounted to $14,468,415.

The report sets forth that exports to the Philippines in the period amounted to Gold $1,167,625 and to Hawaii, Gold $61,002.

OTHER EXPORTS

Besides raw silk, other leading commodities dealt with in the report are: Albumens, shipments of which approximately doubled in the period just closed; laces and embroideries; goat skins, the shipments of which increased in value from $6,767,410 in 1919 to $9,991,276; hair nets, exports of which this year were ten times last year's total and ran far over the million mark in dollars, peanut oil, and pongees, shipments of which increased this year in value from Gold $11,718,613 to Gold $14,468,415.

Washington, July 5.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, on behalf of the city of London, today presented a sword of honor to General Pershing, at the Embassy.

The Ambassador said that Great Britain would not forget those who had proved themselves her friends in the hour of need.

WAR AT PEKING IS NEAR, BELIEF OF TANG SHAO-YI

Southern Statesman Declares Situation There Is Of Utmost Gravity

Mr. Tang Shao-yi, Southern leader and head of the South's Peace Delegation, looks for open warfare and bloodshed as a probable immediate outcome of the situation at Peking.

"It is of the utmost gravity," he said yesterday. He expressed the opinion that President Hsu may be jeopordizing his own high office by exerting pressure to adjust the cabinet controversy at this time and gave the opinion that no one may say what is to be the outcome of the clash of the opposing factions at the Capital.

"With forces gathering as recently they have been doing," he said, "it is wholly probable that fighting may be begun at any time," and he added that the danger of an outbreak of strife is not confined only to Peking.

"It may come quickly at Nanking—and here near Shanghai," he declared. "A single shot may start it all."

ANFUITES STRONGER

On the score of the comparative military strength of the opposing elements he gave it as his belief that the forces of the Anfuites are probably the stronger. He remarked in this connection that Little Hsu, though "in retirement" still must be regarded as an important factor in what is happening.

"He is not of a type that remains quiet" was his comment "and he still has control of a force of probably 20,000 of the best troops at Peking."

Mr. Tang said that the developments of recent weeks and the gathering storm cloud at Peking had rendered futile all hope of resumption of peace talk here.

The clash in the north first must be brought to an end one way or another, he said, before there can be any chance of taking up the peace question between North and South.

He said he believed the chance of effecting a compromise in the controversy at the Capital is altogether remote, for he thought it unlikely that either side would yield.

THE CABINET CRISIS

"President Hsu," he continued, "would be wise to let the cabinet question rest at this time." He made this statement in connection with a Reuter telegram which reviewed the continued refusal of the Anfuites to permit a quorum of Parliament to assemble to act upon the appointment as Premier of Chow Shu-mou. Speaking of the President's efforts to bring about a session of Parliament he was dubious.

"They might choose another President if they did assemble," he commented. "The President

BIG BATTLE NEAR PEKING IS IMMINENT POSSIBILITY

Capital Itself May Be Invaded If Marshal Tuan Goes South

HSU CONCILIATES

Deprives Wu Pei-fu Of General's Rank To Placate Tuan

CHANG IN MUKDEN

Anfu Party Delighted With Turn Affairs Have Taken

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER
(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Peking, July 8—President Hsu is slowly yielding under Marshal Tuan's pressure, He is expected to issue a mandate tonight dismissing both Gen. Wu Pei-fu and Gen. Tsao Kun.

If he does this, it will of course be a straightout victory for Tuan, and will relieve the capital from the imminent danger of a coup and resultant fighting within the walls.

Later—The President continues to weaken, but a compromise is now probable. It is understood that the dismissal of Wu Pei-fu is agreed to, but that the President has asked for more time in which to consider the appointment of Tuan as Premier.

Conferences are proceeding at Tuan's house and also at the presidential palace.

It is said tonight that Chang Tso-lin left the city because of direct threats received from Tuan.

Peking, July 8.—A clash of arms, somewhere between this city and Paotingfu is expected hourly. Chang Tso-lin, after ordering a large body of troops to concentrate near Pei-tai-ho, has departed, leaving Chun Liang-chin in charge.

Chang is also understood to be holding troop-trains at Mukden, ready for a descent upon the Capital.

Tuan Chi-jui is reported to have asked Chang Tso-lin to remain neutral while he (Tuan) settles with Tsao-kun and Wu Pei-fu; but Chang's attitude continues to be doubtful.

One report says that he has decided not to fight, but another indicates that he is merely waiting until Tuan Chi-jui moves southward; whereupon he will move his troops suddenly and take possession of this city.

INSISTS ON FIGHT

Tuan is said to be determined to fight. He is claiming that he has eight divisions at his disposal. The forces of Tuan and Wu Pei-fu are now within a few miles of each other and it is difficult to see how a clash can be avoided. Both armies are billeted in the neighborhood of Cho-sin-tien.

Tsao Kun, meanwhile, is said to be reinforcing his army, while is marking time at Feng-tai, near Peking. Little Hsu is reliably reported to be mobilising in the neighborhood of Kalgan.

Tuan Chi-jui is reported to have drawn large sums of money from the Ministry of Communications, which to pay off his soldiers and persuade them to advance. Military airplanes stationed at Nanyuan have been ordered to rejoin Tuan at the earliest possible moment.

COUP EXPECTED

Any sort of a coup is now possible. Tuan and his supporters are said to be consulting tonight in Tuan's room here in Peking.

Later.—Representatives of the Ministry of Communications have left Peking with the army pay roll. It is hoped that this action will revive the waning pluck and courage of the army, which has been losing morale just standing around.

It is now said that Tuan has been drafting a resolution calling upon Parliament to make him

Premier. Either that or he will seize the reins and establish a dictatorship.

It has just been learned that Chang Tso-lin is temporarily halting his trip at Tientsin.

CHANG TO MUKDEN

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 8.—General Chang Tso-lin left Peking for Mukden at one o'clock this morning. His departure has materially increased the nervousness in Peking. Though the real cause of his departure is not known, the opinion in official circles is that he intends to make preparations for the despatch of a strong force to Peking.

The vernacular newspapers report that General Chang Tso-lin has given orders to the 27th and 28th Divisions at Mukden and also to the Fengtien Brigade at Chengchow to move on Peking immediately

SITUATION GRAVE

Without doubt the situation has suddenly become graver. Marshal Tuan Chi-jui apparently insists that General Wu Pei-fu shall be punished for interfering in politics, while General Chang Tso-lin defends him.

Marshal Tuan Chi-jui argues that, as General Hsu Shu-tseng has been dismissed for interference in politics, General Wu Pei-fu should receive similar punishment.

The President endeavored to smooth over matters, but Marshal Tuan has stubbornly refused to accept any compromise.

SECURE AMMUNITION

The sudden strengthening of the Anfu Party is explained partly by the fact that the supply of ammunition, which was reported to have been intercepted by General Wu Pei-fu, reached Fengtai yesterday morning and has now been transferred to Nanyuan. Shortly after, one regiment of the First Frontier Division under Gen. Feng-tsung was despatched to Lukouchiao.

This morning Marshal Tuan Chi-jui called a meeting of senior officers at Tsaichengpu and announced his intention of punishing General Wu Pei-fu. Subsequently the President, in an endeavor to placate Tuan, gave orders that General Wu should be deprived of the rank of Lieutenant-General, on the ground that, without orders, he freely moved troops on the Pehan line.

WON'T BE APPEASED

A mandate to this effect is being prepared; but it is doubtful if this will appease Marshal Tuan Chi-jui—who, according to report, intends to take drastic reprisals and arrest all who opposed him in the recent developments.

The Chinese expect something in the nature of a coup d'etat.

Anfu circles are jubilant today, as they apparently believe that General Chang Tso-lin has abandoned the field. This change of attitude is reflected in the Anfu press, which attacks the prime movers of the recent developments, charging the "fool President" with permitting General Wu Pei-fu to "violate the Constitution" and also attacks General Chang Tso-lin and General Tsao Kun.

GENERAL HSU APPEARS

General Hsu Shu-tseng has emerged from his retirement and has virtually resumed command of the Frontier Defense troops at Peking, and is also endeavoring to secure the unpaid balance of the war participation loan from the Exchange Bank.

Whether the Anfu Club retains its present advantages depends on General Chang Tso-lin, while the situation in the immediate future depends on whether Marshal Tuan Chi-jui considers General Wu Pei-fu's deprivation of rank as adequate punishment, or whether he will precipitate a final trial of strength by letting loose the dogs of war.

TROOPS MOBILIZE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 7.—The events of the last few days have delayed the reorganisation of the Cabinet. Many of the Anfu members of Parliament have been absent, thus preventing a quorum.

The popular scare reached a high level last night and this morning, when it became known that Marshal Tuan Chi-jui had ordered the First and Third Frontier Defence Divisions to Lukouchiao, where they will be in touch with General Wu Pei-fu's troops.

The Anfuites state that General Wu Pei-fu's troops had intercepted ammunition intended for the Frontier Defense Force, while Marshal Tuan Chi-jui was probably influenced by the fact that the Government had ordered the First Division to Paotingfu, which would cut off its connection with the Third Division and leave the Anfu Club only the latter in the vicinity of the capital.

VAN AT FENGTAI

General Wu Pei-fu's advance guard also had reached Fengtai, further weakening the position of the Club.

This morning General Chang Tso-lin visited Marshal Tuan Chi-jui and succeeded in persuading him to cancel the order for the two divisions to proceed to Lukouchiao.

It is doubtful whether Marshal Tuan Chi-jui intended anything more than to create a scare, from which the Anfu Club might derive a compromise advantage as the Second Frontier Division is safely blanketted at Tsinanfu, while General Hsu Shu-tseng's four Mixed Brigades are stationed as follows:

The first Brigade at Langfang, the Second at Honanfu, the Third at Kalgan and the Fourth at Urga.

With Chihli troops holding the Pehan-Tsinpu lines, the Third Mixed Brigade is the only reinforcement available to Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, whereas General Chang Tso-lin and Marshal Tuan's other opponents would be able to concentrate considerable forces on Peking in a few days.

OFFICIAL DENIAL

Peking, July 7.—The report that Wang I-tang has been removed from his post as Chief Northern Peace Delegate is officially denied.

POST ABOLISHED

Peking, July 7.—When the post of Military Governor of Shanghai was abolished, General Lu Yung-hsiang sent a strongly-worded telegram to the Government.

The Government, in their reply, said that they doubted that such a telegram could have emanated from General Lu Yung-hsiang, and explained that the Military Governorship had been established to meet circumstances created by the Third Revolution, and that the need for it no longer existed.

General Lu's reply to this telegram was couched in more moderate language.

CHANG SURRENDERS

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, July 5.—Chang Ching-yao, the deposed Tuchun and Acting Civil Governor of Hunan, who fled to Hankow following the fall of Yochow, has agreed to surrender his troops to General Wang Chuan-yuan, in pursuance with instructions from the Peking government.

In an interview with General Wang of Wuchang, at Chang's residence at Hankow, the latter definitely transferred all of his routed troops to General Wang, who has guaranteed their proper handling and disposal.

Chang has renounced all control of his troops, and has assured General Wang that the latter will be obedient under their new commander.

General Wang has assigned certain outlying districts as headquarters for the remnants of Chang's army, fearing their stay in Wuchang or Hankow might cause serious misunderstanding and panic among the people.

WU REFUSES POST

General Chang Ching-yao was interviewed by General Wu Kwang-hsin, brother-in-law and close follower of Field Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, and the newly appointed Military Governor of Hunan, in succession to Chang at the latter's home in Hankow, on July 3.

In the course of their conversation General Chang asked General Wu when the latter was prepared to accept the official seal of the Military Governor and Acting Civil Governor of Hunan, to which post General Wu Kwang-hsin was recently appointed by the Central Government.

General Wu replied that he had repeatedly refused to accept this post, and expressed himself as being against this appointment inasmuch as the province of Hunan is now in the hands of General Tan Yen-kai and the southern forces and the Hunan deadlock has not been solved.

AN EYE ON PROFIT

It is interesting to note that General Chang, even at this unhappy hour of bitter disappointment, is interested in commercial gains as much as when he was Tuchun of Hunan.

He has sent a certain Yang, one of his subordinates, to Hongkong to find the whereabouts of one of his former employes, named Cheng, who is there representing him as selling agent for the Shun Feng Rice Mill at Changsha.

Cheng transported about 50,000 piculs of Hunan rice from Changsha to Hongkong; and, on account of the rice crisis there, made great profits from the consignment.

On hearing of the failure of General Chang at Changsha however, Cheng did not come back as ordered by Chang, nor did he remit any money.

READING OF PRIZE-LIST

The Prefect of Studies, Rev. Father C. Vanara, S. J., read out the prize-list and awards granted to the most successful pupils. The Special Prize of Honor given by the French Academy was won by Yeu Oh-gneh. Other prizes were awarded in the various departments of the College curriculum.

Twenty four students were recipients of prizes in Church History, the New Testament, Apologetics, and general Christian doctrine.

SECULAR AND GENERAL

This department combines an ample and varied program of subjects admirably adapted by the College Principal and Staff to the needs of China and the welfare of those countless youths, who cannot go to Europe or America, but wish to get a sound and thorough education, foreign and Chinese, while remaining in their own country. Prizes and distinctions were awarded in philosophy, proficiency in the Latin tongue, Chinese Classics and Composition. French and English Literature. Mathematics, Physics, History and Geography, Mensuration and Drawing.

The College closed the educational year by bestowing the B. A. degree upon 15 graduates, who passed the usual examination tests, written and oral, before the Staff of the Aurora University. Among the successful graduates, 3 passed with Honors, and 8 with distinctions. The Examiners remarked that the Mathematics and Chinese compositions of the students were extremely brilliant. These youthful graduates may enter the Aurora University in September next, and take up Civil Engineering, or pursue their studies in the Medical or Law Departments at their option. They may go also go to France, and study in any of the National Universities without having to undergo any entrance examination.

DIPLOMAS CONFERRED

Various diplomas were conferred on students completing their studies in other departments. Principal among these were 22, who completed their secondary educational course; 7 others who completed their commercial course; and 37 who finished their Higher Primary Course. All these, making the remarkable aggregate of 66, received honorary diplomas, and will henceforth start on a business career, some as bankers, compradores, and commercial agents, others as teachers, interpreters, corresponding and bookkeeping clerks in the leading hongs of Shanghai, Ningpo, Hankow, Tientsin and others important ports of their native country.

ADDRESSES BY STAFF

At the close of the ceremony, which lasted 2 full hours, the Rector of the College, Rev. E. Beauce, S. J. delivered a stirring address to the students, and congratulated them on the great success of the year's work. He was happy to state that despite great inducements to interrupt their studies, and join in the strike of their fellow-students against the ill-treatment of their country by Japan, they held on to their work, and set an example of stern discipline which will benefit their country in the future. The Masters were likewise highly pleased with the good work, application, and general good conduct of the students, and all wished them every success in their future careers.

To the above address, two of the successful graduates replied, one on French and the other in English. Both thanked the Staff for the splendid education received at their hands, as well as the zeal and care constantly displayed in building up character, and making them useful and leading members of society.

SEVENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

In November next, the College will celebrate the 70th anniversary of its foundation. Among the survivors of the early days, we may specially mention Mr. Ma Siang-peh, China's great orator, writer and patriot. Others hold distinguished places in the ranks of the native clergy, and in the diplomatic, industrial and commercial world. All, it is hoped, will meet at Siccawei on the anniversary of their College foundation and celebrate the event with heartfelt thanks.

On this occasion, it is proposed to found a certain number of burses, and thus enable the College to extend the benefits of a sound and thorough education to a large number of deserving students.

The College closes the year with a roll of 420 students, all boarders. This augurs much for the future, and it is hoped the establishment will open in September with a full attendance of 450, or possibly more.

BRITAIN PLANS VAST INCREASE IN EXPENDITURE

Budget For 1920-21 Billion Pounds More Than Was Used In 1913-14

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 6.—A Treasury memorandum gives interesting comparisons between actual expenditures in 1913-14 and the estimates for 1919-20. For instance:

1913-14
National Debt	£24,500,000
Fighting services ..	£76,027,000
Civil Services	£55,005,000
Revenue Departments	£29,460,000
Gross expenditure ..	£207,847,000
1919-20
National Debt	£335,000,000
Fighting services ..	£269,170,000
Civil Services	£555,626,000
Revenue Departments	£61,280,000
Gross expenditure.	£1,282,198,000

It is pointed out that the 1920-21 estimates contain contemplated expenditures of £341,613,000, including £123,235,000 on war pensions.

The balance consists mainly of grants, subsidies and advances, for which there was no provision before the war.

CUTS WINE DUTY

London, July 6.—In the debate on the budget in the House of Commons today, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that he proposed to reduce the fifty percent ad valorem duty on sparkling wines to 33 1-3 percent.

JAPAN WILL NOT NEGOTIATE WITH RUSSIANS ABOUT "BUFFER STATE"

and that the Russian authorities of the Amur district sent a steamer to meet them and to carry them up the river.

The Japanese communique further states that two Japanese companies are still stationed in Blagoveschensk, and that they are threatened with deadly danger in the city, barred off from the rest of the world.

The authorities of the Amur district are quite ignorant of the destiny of the Russian population, as well as the partisans who were driven away from Nikolaievsk and Saghalin.

DIED OF STARVATION

According to information that occasionally reaches Blagoveschensk, the greater part of the population in Nikolaievsk perished from starvation in the forest.

There is not a single Japanese soldier or Japanese resident, either in Blagoveschensk or throughout the Amur district.

The entire communique is to be regarded as the opening of a campaign calculated to justify, in the eyes of the world, preparations for an armed invasion of the Amur district.

THE TRUE CAUSE

The true cause of this campaign was revealed on July 1, through the statement made by the Japanese headquarters in Saghalin to the representative of the Amur District of the Far Eastern Republic—that the Verdhne-udinsk Government did not satisfy it and that, unless the Amur authorities changed their policy of gravitation toward the Verdhne-udinsk Government, the destiny of Nikolaievsk and other cities of the Maritime Province would fall to their lot.

"We have pretext," said the Japanese, in conclusion.

So Crisp

—and Delicious, too!

There are definite reasons why the New Post Toasties are vastly superior in crispness and flavour to any other corn flakes.

In the new process of baking, intense heat raises tiny air "puffs" on each flake, bringing out a decidedly new and delicious flavour—the true flavour of the corn—unknown to the corn flakes of the past.

Owing to this new process the New Toasties maintain their crispness untill eaten and do not grow soft and mushy in the bowl like other corn flakes.

The flavour is so delightfully pleasant that the New Post Toasties may be eaten and relished dry, though of course they are generally served with cream, rich milk, or fruit with a sprinkling of sugar.

Chinese, In Long Protest, Tell Great Britain Why Anglo-Jap Pact Is Wrong

When Europe was desperately engaged in a life-and-death struggle for liberty, Japan presented to China January 18, 1910, the well-known 'Twenty-one Demands.'

"These demands could only be matched in spirit and purpose with the demands Austria made upon Servia which led to the World War.

"The dark designs of the demands were greatly heightened by Japan's unusual actions. Instead of presenting these demands through the regular diplomatic channel of the Chinese Government, its Foreign Office, the Japanese Minister handed same to President Yuan Shih-k'ai directly, who was required to maintain utter secrecy and to take speedy action.

"When secrecy could no longer be maintained, Japan at first made official denial of the existence of any of the demands, then the existence of some of them, and finally had to confess to the existence of all of them.

"The demands cannot stand any scrutiny without arousing indignation, even among impartial observers of Far Eastern affairs.

"We will quote the words of a well-known British publicist where analysis of the demands will go to show such indignation.

"In the first group of these articles China concedes in advance any arrangements that Japan might in the future make with Germany regarding the possession of Kiaochow and other rights in the province of Shantung.

"The way was thus paved for Japan's later victory at the Peace Conference.

"In the second group of articles Japan demands that China recognise Japan's special privileges in Manchuria, privileges accorded to no other nation. For example, Article 3 reads:

"'Japanese subjects shall be free to reside and travel in South Manchuria and Eastern Inner Mongolia and engage in business and manufacture of any kind whatsoever.'

"'Article 4.—'The Chinese Government agrees to grant to Japanese subjects, the right of opening the mines in South Manchuria and Eastern Mongolia.'

"'Article 6.—'If the Chinese Government employs political, financial, or military advisers or instructors in South Manchuria or Eastern Mongolia, the Japanese Government shall first be consulted.'

"'That is how Japan kept her promise to maintain the 'Open Door' and the independence of China in Manchuria.

"'In Group Four, furthermore:

"'The Chinese Government engages not to cede or lease to any third power any harbor or bay or island along the coast of China.

"'Even this group, however, did not offer the worst instance of special privilege or infringement of China's sovereignty.

"'The articles of group five go further:

"'Article 1.—'The Chinese Central Government shall employ influential Japanese as advisers in political, financial, and military affairs.'

"'Article 3.—'The police departments of important places (in China) shall be jointly administrated by Japanese and Chinese, or the police departments of these places shall employ numerous Japanese. . . .'

"'Article 4.—'China shall purchase from Japan a fixed amount of munitions of war (say 50 percent or more of what is needed by the Chinese Government) or there shall be established in China a Sino-Japanese jointly-worked arsenal. Japanese technical experts are to be employed and Japanese material to be purchased.'

"'Article 6.—'If China needs foreign capital to work mines, build railways, and construct harbor works (including dock-yards) in the Province of Fukien, Japan shall first be consulted.'

"In making these demands Japan broke at least six solemn public promises. That she had forgotten neither the spirit nor the letter of these promises, and that she was ready to break one more, is a fact confirmed by a statement issued on May 6, 1915, by Secretary Bryan.

"At the beginning of negotiations the Japanese Government confidentially informed this Government of the matters which were under discussion, and accompanied the informations by the assurance that Japan had no intention of interfering with either the political independence or territorial integrity of China, and that nothing she proposed would discriminate against other Powers having treaties with China, or interfere with the "Open Door" policy to which all the leading nations are committed.

"What are we to think of the pledged word of a nation which could vouch for such assurances at a time when its Government was attempting to wrench from China the control of her own armament and her own territory?

"Through just such stages did Korea slowly succumb, that same Korea whose "Independence" was once as firmly guaranteed by Japan.

"This fact was clear to China and to all the world; an indignant public opinion in China, England and America prevented China's signing the articles under Groups Four and Five.

EMBARRASSMENT TO BRITAIN

"The position of Great Britain was made quite embarrassing by Japan's actions, both during the war and at the Peace Conference, when dealing with the Shantung question.

"Great Britain declared war against Germany on account of the latter's attack on France and violation of the neutrality of Belgium; yet she had to give tacit consent to Japan's violation of the neutrality of China when Japan declared war on Germany and undertook to reduce the German held at Kiaochou.

"Instead of landing her forces within the leased territory of Kiaochou, as the British did, she took them to Lungkou, a point two hundred miles to the Northwest of Tsingtao; and again, instead of marching her soldiers Southeastward towards the point of attack, namely, Tsingtao, they pushed Southwestward towards Tsinan, the capital of Shantung, which was then neutral territory.

"Great Britain was further embarrassed by the secret agreement entered into between Great Britain and Japan on February 16, 1917, wherein Great Britain promised to support Japan on the Shantung question at the Peace Conference.

"This promise was the price Great Britain had to pay in order to retain Japan's support in the prosecution of the war; yet it was done at a time when China was being induced to join the war on the side of the Allies, which she afterwards actually did.

"Our people learned with great pain of the existence of this secret agreement, when it was made known at the Peace Conference, knowing fully well its effect upon the Shantung question as Great Britain would feel in honor bound to maintain the treaty.

DIPLOMATIC INDEPENDENCE

"During the last two decades there has developed the practice among the Powers of treating China as a semi-dependent country. Instead of treating directly with China concerning her affairs and welfare, they treated among themselves as if China were a mere diplomatic appendage.

"The Chinese people cannot but regard such practice with apprehension and resentment, especially in the case where a certain Power assumes a paternal diplomatic relationship to China and pretends to exercise a right to intervene in the diplomatic intercourse between China and any other country.

"Even the United States Government made the same mistake in the exchange of the Lansing-Ishii notes without consulting China. Our Government had to file a protest against it.

"The United States of America has always maintained the most friendly attitude towards China, but we refuse to be treated except as an independent nation exercising full sovereign rights.

ORIGINAL LEAGUE MEMBER

"With the formal ratification by China of the Austrian Treaty, which she signed with the Allied Powers on the one hand and Austria on the other, we became a full member of the League of Nations.

"A renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance under the existing or similar terms, taken with the previous interpretation of the Alliance in practice, will cause the Chinese strongly to suspect that, when China takes an appeal to the League of Nations for redress of her grievances, Great Britain and Japan will be found to have made a private agreement prejudical to China's case, and which may adversely affect China's hope of obtaining justice from the League.

"This has been amply borne out by the secret agreement made between Great Britain and Japan on February 16, 1917, which was one of the chief factors, if not the chief factor, in deciding the Shantung question in favor of Japan.

"China was obliged to refrain from signing the German Treaty as a protest against the injustice of the Shantung settlement.

"We would wish to see that Great Britain will make no further entangling alliances which might tie her hands again on questions brought by China before the League of Nations.

THE PEOPLE'S VOICE

"In presenting this memorandum to the British Government we merely voice the sentiment of the people. In our humble opinion the changed conditions of the world today do not call for any further renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

"The motives of the Alliance, so far as China is concerned, do not exist today. The aggressive and imperialistic policy of Russia and Germany has passed away and there is no further menace from any other Power.

"The violation of the objects of the Alliance by Japan has seriously embarrassed Great Britain. The renewal of the Alliance, at least under the existing or similar terms, tends only to irritate China on the one hand and to cause Great Britain to share the distrust of the Chinese people so widely and deeply entertained towards Japan.

"China, from this time on, desires and means to exercise full sovereign rights and diplomatic independence in her international relationships.

"A renewal of the Alliance will only cause the Chinese people strongly to suspect Great Britain's having some other motives, as the Government of the League of Nations fully covers the ground of the Alliance, and China is an original member of the League."

VISCOUNT GREY SPEAKS AGAINST SECRET TREATIES

Says Day Has Gone When Need Of Such Pacts Was Apparent

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 6.—Speaking at the inaugural meeting of the British Institute of International Affairs, which has been forced for the study of national policies, Viscount Grey said that the Government should give it out clearly, to be understood by the world, that they would not have secret treaties in time of peace.

"I, myself," Viscount Grey continued, "have been a party to making some secret treaties, but it was in time of war and I would suggest that it should be regarded as a fair rule of foreign policy that you should not have secret treaties in peace time.

MUST KEEP PEACE

"We have got peace and, if we want to keep peace in the world in future, we must think not only nationally but internationally, as well.

"One of the great lessons of the war is that thinking nationally without thinking internationally leads to disaster.

"Before the war Germany was thinking more intensely nationally, and less internationally, than any other country in the world and it led to disaster."

Mr. Arthur Balfour made a speech, cordially supporting Viscount Grey's views.

SPEAKS FOR LABOR

Mr. Clynes, speaking on behalf of the Labor Party, emphasised the increased interest which Labor was taking in foreign affairs. He said that Labor should be possessed of the fullest possible knowledge on these questions.

BRITISH WARSHIPS BOMBARD BEIBOS

Bosphorus City, Seized By Turkish Rebels, Stormed By Allied Armies

(Literary Digest)

London, July 6.—The Daily Mail Constantinople correspondent telegraphs:

"Turkish rebels, supported by the inhabitants, occupied Beibos on the Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus, opposite the Allied headquarters on the European side.

"Fighting with the British and Greek troops ensued and British warships bombarded the rebel positions. The Allies subsequently withdrew."

DEFINES BRITAIN'S PART

London, July 5.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Lieut.-Colonel L'Estrange Malone, Mr. Bonar Law said that British naval and military support to the Greeks against the Turks would be confined to what was necessary to insure the freedom of the Straits and the fulfilment of the peace terms. The reinforcements sent to Constantinople were intended solely for that purpose.

In reply to another question, Mr. Bonar Law said that the Allies, of course, were assisting in resisting attack.

Lieut.-Col. Malone: "Have the Turks been informed of what the Greeks and the Allies are fighting for in view of the fact that the Turks have not yet signed the Treaty?"

Mr. Bonar Law replied: "It was not thought necessary. If somebody attacked you, that should explain to him why you hit him back."

TURKS OVERWHELMED

London, July 6.—The Times states:

"The Turkish defeat by the Greeks at Balikesri (or Balikessar) was more complete than at first reported. There is little expectation that the Turkish forces, cut off in Troad will be able to escape.

"The Turks are retiring towards Brusa, where a stand is expected. The Greeks are in pursuit.

"In the meantime an Islam-Bolshevist agitation is being carried on among the Anatolian peasantry."

Prince Arthur Urges England To Grow Timber

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 5.—The British Empire Timber Exhibition was opened in London this afternoon by Prince Arthur of Connaught. The exhibits show a very representative collection of timbers.

The Prince, in the course of his opening speech, referred briefly to his impending departure for South Africa as Governor-General where, he declared, he would do his utmost to foster and encourage afforestation.

NEED BROAD POLICY

He urged that every Dominion required a far-sighted policy of forest conservation. Experience during the war had taught how large a part timber played in the equipment and movement of armies and the danger of dependence on foreign sources. The Prince pointed out that in 1913 90 percent of timber used in England came from abroad.

Prince Arthur extended a cordial welcome to the members of the Empire Forestry Conference, which is meeting simultaneously with the Exhibition.

The Conference is discussing the responsibility of the State for timber production, the question of technical forestry and also the possibility of establishing an Imperial Forestry Bureau.

Almost all the factories have elected communists as their representatives to the Soviet.

The Putilov works, known as being unfriendly to the Communist party, have elected representatives of this party to the Soviet.

By June 30, out of 1,624 deputies elected to the Petrograd Soviet, 1,230 were Communists, the remaining being non-partisans.

Accountant Charged With $8,000 Theft From Silk Company

Police Say Prisoner Has Admitted Losses In Bad Speculation

Embezzlement of $8,000 from the Hankow Branch of the Yah Foong Silk Company is charged against Dzung Ah-yui, an accountant for the firm, who was called before American Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Tsang in the Mixed Court yesterday. The case was remanded for a week.

The accountant disappeared from his place of employment two weeks ago and an investigation showed that he was $8,000 short in his accounts, according to the complainant. Search was made for the man but nothing was heard of him until Tuesday when he was seen on the streets of Shanghai by a member of the firm. He was arrested at once.

Detective Sergeant Schmidt told the court yesterday that the accused had admitted the embezzlement of more than $3,000, saying that he had lost the money in speculation.

Chinese Mafia Is Suspected When Nine Are Arrested

An organised gang of blackmailers which has been operating for some time in the Bubbling Well district is believed by the police to have been rounded up in the arrest of nine men who were before the Mixed Court yesterday. American Assessor Tenney and Magistrate Yui allowed a week's remand for further investigation of the case.

In the band are one houseboy, two chauffeurs, three tailors, a mafoo, a coolie and a loafer. Sub Inspector Mackenzie said that he believed investigation would show that the men have extorted considerable sums from other Chinese through threats of violence.

AMBITIOUS PLAN FOR BALL GAMES

Players Preparing To Make Fans Here Sit Up And Take Notice

Because there were not enough of both the Regulars and Bolsheviki present at the ball park the scheduled game between the teams did not take place. Two teams with the assistance of a couple of the ball park coolies were made up and a pretty fair exhibition of the great national sport was given for the enjoyment of the few fans who were present despite the threatening weather.

Some good pitching and hitting by both teams helped to make things interesting until the thunder storm came along in the sixth inning and put a stop to the proceedings. Some ambitious plans are now afoot for a big series to take place within the next few days.

The Bolsheviki are to have the services of Claire in the box as an offset to Gill pitching for the regulars.

Some pretty nifty games are due to take place when these two runners get going against each other. Mr. Dodge, who is to handle the Bolsheviki, promises that the winning team members will each be given a gold plated safety razor so with this prize as an incentive the players will be out to win the fancy chin scrapers. Impresario Dodge is going to handle his team all same Hughie Jennings style and declares that it will be some team. As soon as plans are completed for this live series, announcement will be made in these columns.

Lawn Bowls

What a wash out it was last Sunday, 64 of the best with nothing to do and one of the finest organised games of the season on tap? The prospects do not look any too rosy for this week-end at the time of writing.

The great annual encounter between the Engineers Institute and the Lawn Bowls Club is scheduled for Sunday next at the Race course and if only old "Jupiter Pluvius" or whatever his name is will be decent there ought to be a great game. Last season there was not much to choose between them, only a difference of two or three points or so on both games. The Engineers being drawn from the various clubs there will be no other match of importance on that day. The teams are well balanced and the result should be very close.

Great efforts have been made to get through the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Association Championship rounds this week and despite the rain some really tough games have been concluded. The Pairs match between Stormes and Shaw (S.R.C.) against Chilver and Pitt (L.B.C.) was a tussle. After being up against a big lead for a long time Stormes and Shaw pulled the game off by the odd point, 21/20. Several Singles have been played and attempts to settle the rank games.

The teams to represent the L. B. C. and The Institute are as follows:

was elected by the Parliament and if the Anfu majority is forced to come together and hold a session at this critical time there is no telling what they may not do."

Mr. Tang was unsparing in his condemnation of both sides in the present controversy.

ALL MILITARISTS

"Both of them are militarists merely," he explained. "It is a fight in any case merely for military advantage, and militarism is a thing that none of us want now. They talk of these generals having gone over to the South." He snapped his fingers. "It means nothing. They can be nothing to us."

Mr. Tang discountenanced a report current in Chinese official circles yesterday that Liang Shih-yi is coming to Shanghai to supplant General Wang Yi-tang as Northern Peace delegate.

Mr. Tang said that it is true that the noted Chinese financier is coming to Shanghai, but he added that he is on his way to Hongkong, not on any official or political business but in connection with the wedding of a member of his family.

King George Lays A Cornertone At Edinburgh Univ.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 6.—The King today laid the foundation stone of the extension buildings at Edinburgh University, after which the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on the Queen.

The King, in the course of his speech, said that at a time when the Prince of Wales was receiving a universal welcome in the British Dominions, it was appropriate that their Majesties should renew acquaintance with the great Scottish seat of learning; which, perhaps beyond all other Universities, attracted to itself the aspiring youth of the Empire.

His Majesty added that he hoped that the pathways of peace and prosperity would be inaugurated in the new building.

Parchases Diamond, Disappears, Caught, Gets Year's Term

A Chinese servant saw a diamond belonging to Mr. A. Holzberg several weeks ago and coveted it. He asked the foreigner the price of the stone and was informed that he could have it for $140.

The bargain was made and the purchaser asked the dealer to accompany him to his house in Honan Road for the money. Mr. Holzberg complied and saw the man and jewel disappear inside a dwelling on that street.

That was the last time he saw either until Tuesday. On that day he saw the man—but not the diamond.

"Half a loaf—" he muttered, and called a policeman.

The Mixed Court yesterday held that the evidence was insufficient to warrant conviction on the charge of larceny but upon discovering that the accused had ten previous convictions meted out one year's imprisonment for returning to the Settlement after having been expelled.

FINGER PRINTS OF THIEF LEAD TO AN ARREST

Man Suspected Of Looting Downtown Offices Is Caught By Police

Mystery that has surrounded the looting of a number of offices in downtown buildings in the last few weeks has been cleared up, the police believe, by the arrest of Zung Kwai-sung, alias Ying Tien-ming, by the detective force of the Central Station. He is to appear before the Mixed Court for trial next Monday.

On eight different occasions a burglar broke into an office building at 18 Kiangse Road, looting a different establishment each time. And on each visit he left finger prints that convinced the police that the same man was responsible for all the offenses.

The other robberies were committed in an office building at Kiangse Road. Again the finger prints identified him as the robber who had worked at 18 Kiangse Road.

Zung was seen acting suspiciously in the vicinity of 6 Foochow Road and after he had entered the enclosed premises at that address was taken into custody. His finger prints tallied with those of the office burglar, according to the police.

Takes Pane From Window To Please Master; Arrested

Houseboy Says He Used Unusual Methods To Let Employer Sleep

Consideration for his master's feelings led Dzang Tsing-kung, a houseboy, into the Mixed Court yesterday on a charge of attempted burglary.

Dzang just couldn't bear to think of waking up his master, Mr. Berlho, 8 Haskell Road, and so when he found all the doors bolted a few mornings ago when he came to work he carefully removed a pane from of the windows, shot the bolt in the door and let himself in without noise.

It so happened that the master had heard a noise about midnight and had carefully bolted all the doors and windows and in consequence he was somewhat surprised when his boy appeared at his bedside at 7 a.m. with a cup of coffee for him.

"How did you get in?" demanded the surprised foreigner.

"I have a key," explained the boy.

But that didn't satisfy the master and he started on a tour of investigation. Then he found that a pane of glass had been removed but was carefully placed with putty made of soft bread and soap and painted to resemble the original workmanship.

He called a policeman.

"It was the only way I could get in," explained the boy.

"Dismissed," said the court.

Russ Ships Seized By Police Of Settlement

the vessels from the Siberian run and place them in service elsewhere.

As a result shipping service between China and Japan and Siberian ports was paralyzed at a time when it was most needed, many of the ports in the north being icebound most of the year. If service is not resumed to these ports, at once, it is pointed out, the inhabitants of that part of the world will face a serious shortage of food and other supplies.

POLICE TAKE ACTION

M. Feodoroff set about tying up the ships of the fleet as fast as possible. He had some of them stopped in Japan ports and others in Shanghai. Then, through Mr. Grosse, yesterday, an appeal was made to the Municipal police here to oust the sailors who would not take orders from the consular body and who maintained allegiance to the Vladivostock directorate.

Viewing the affair as within police province, since the vessels were lying at dock and not in the stream, Major Hilton-Johnson complied with the request of Mr. Grosse and led a detachment of 46 men to the scene and removed the seamen. The police head explained that he had no alternative as it was customary for the police to respond to the call of a foreign consulate and that the former Romanoff officials here and at Peking were officially recognised as representing Russia and would continue to be looked upon in that light until some new government receives the recognition of the Allies.

Mr. Grosse was asked upon what authority he had seized the vessels. He replied:

"I represent Russia; not any faction or clique but my country as a whole. When some government in Russia is recognised by the powers I will tender my resignation. In the meantime, I will remain at my post and do my utmost to look out for the interest of Russia and Russians."

PROTEST IS MADE

Following the removal of the sailors from the ships a delegation from the Penza made a formal protest to the Russian consulate, Vice Consul V. C. Metzler replied as follows:

"To the delegates of the sailors of the Penza, City of Shanghai, this eighth of July, by command of the Russian Consul General in Shanghai: The sailors were taken off by armed force from the Penza because they refused to obey the orders of the Manager of the Volunteer fleet in the Far East, Mr. Feodoroff."

Mr. Grosse said last night that the disposition to be made of the men now in the refuge camp has not yet been determined. The matter will be taken up with the legation at Peking. They may be sent back to Vladivostok or some other action may be taken. The crews are subject to the orders of M. Feodoroff, as head of the Fleet, a fact which, he says, is fully recognised and acknowledged by the masters of the ships.

There was no disorder connected with the removal of the men from the vessels. As soon as the sailors were ashore they were placed on board 19 motor cars and two motor trucks and conveyed to the refuge camp.

Ownership of the Russian Volunteer Fleet was vested half in private interests and half in the government. According to the regulations under which it originally operated the management was compelled to remain on Russian soil. This was made a basis for argument against the mandates of the contingent at Constantinople.

Recently two ships of the fleet, the Kishineff and Yana, which were in Japan ports ignored Feodoroff's refusal to give them clearance papers and set sail for Vladivostok. The Yana got away safely but the Kishineff was held up at Hakodate where the Japanese officials demanded a fine of Yen 70,000 for sailing without proper papers. The Simbirsk, which was held up for a month here, is also being held in a Japan port, according to latest reports here.

Commencement Exercises

Soochow, July 6.—The fourteenth annual commencement of Soochow University wound up today with the presentation of certificates and diplomas, and the baccalaureate address by Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham.

The meeting of the Alumni Association on Saturday was well attended. On Sunday morning, Rev. Z. T. Kaung, of Huchow, an alumnus of the University, preached the commencement Sermon at St. John's Methodist Church.

The usual student features—debates, orations, etc.—were omitted this year, in order that the students might devote their entire time to study and make up in part for the time lost during the strike.

EVERY ONE PASSED

That they have profited by this opportunity is evidenced in part by the fact that, in the fourth year Middle School class, of more than forty, every student passed his examinations, and all received their Middle School certificates except half-a-dozen, who had entered with their Chinese studies one year behind their "Western subjects" and have not yet made up that deficiency.

Four men received B. A. degrees and ten men the B. S. degree.

BEST IN HISTORY

The President of the University reported that the year just closing had been the best in the history of the institution, and in that of the other schools of the University system, viz., the law department in Shanghai, the Bible school in Sungkiang, Middle School Number Two in Shanghai and Middle School Number Three in Huchow, together with some twenty lower and higher primary schools.

Consul-General Cunningham then addressed the graduating classes on the subject of "Education," not an unusual subject for such an occasion but treated with unusual clearness and interest.

He first pointed out some traits of the truly educated man, which included honesty, industry, methodical habits, concentration of purpose, conservation, and patriotism. He showed how the World War had brought need for these traits of character in the young of the countries engaged in that great struggle.

WORLD DEMANDS MORE

The world is demanding more of the educated man today than ever before, he said. The responsibility of the educated man is great in all countries at all times, but that responsibility rests more heavily on the educated men of China today than on those of any other country, both on account of the peculiar conditions of the country, and of the small proportion of its citizens who belong to the educated class.

The Consul then dwelt at length on the necessity of the virtue of patriotism, and the unity of China, if she is to take the proper place in the family of nations, quoting from Washington's "Farewell Address."

PLEA FOR PATRIOTS

He made an unusually strong appeal to the young men to dedicate their lives to service to their country. To do this most efficiently he said, would probably require still [illegible] specialization along special lines for the development and conservation of China's natural resources—second to those of no other country—require specialists along many lines.

He then warned his hearers against being too anxious to go abroad for study; that study abroad has its advantages, but that there is great danger of a student hurrying away to a foreign country to study before he properly understands and appreciates his own country and his problems, thus failing to get the greatest good from study abroad.

The Middle School scholarship, worth $100 a year to the winner, if he pursues his studies through the college, was awarded to Mr. Bang Zau-yie of Swatow.

ABOUT BABY'S WEIGHT

Healthy babies should steadily increase in weight. When baby is not doing this there is something wrong, as was the case with the child of Mrs. Thomas Lawrence, a Canadian lady living at Colling wood, Ontario.

"My baby has been very delicate ever since she was three weeks old," writes Mrs. Lawrence. "She had indigestion, and although she had a ravenous appetite her food did not do her any good and she grew thinner and thinner. She would scream with the pain in her stomach, and as she was also troubled with constipation we were at times afraid we would lose her. I tried several medicines for her but they did no good. Then I tried Baby's Own Tablets, and her digestion improved. Now food does her good, and she is growing plump. I think the Tablets are a fine medicine for a child."

The extent of the epidemic is not announced.

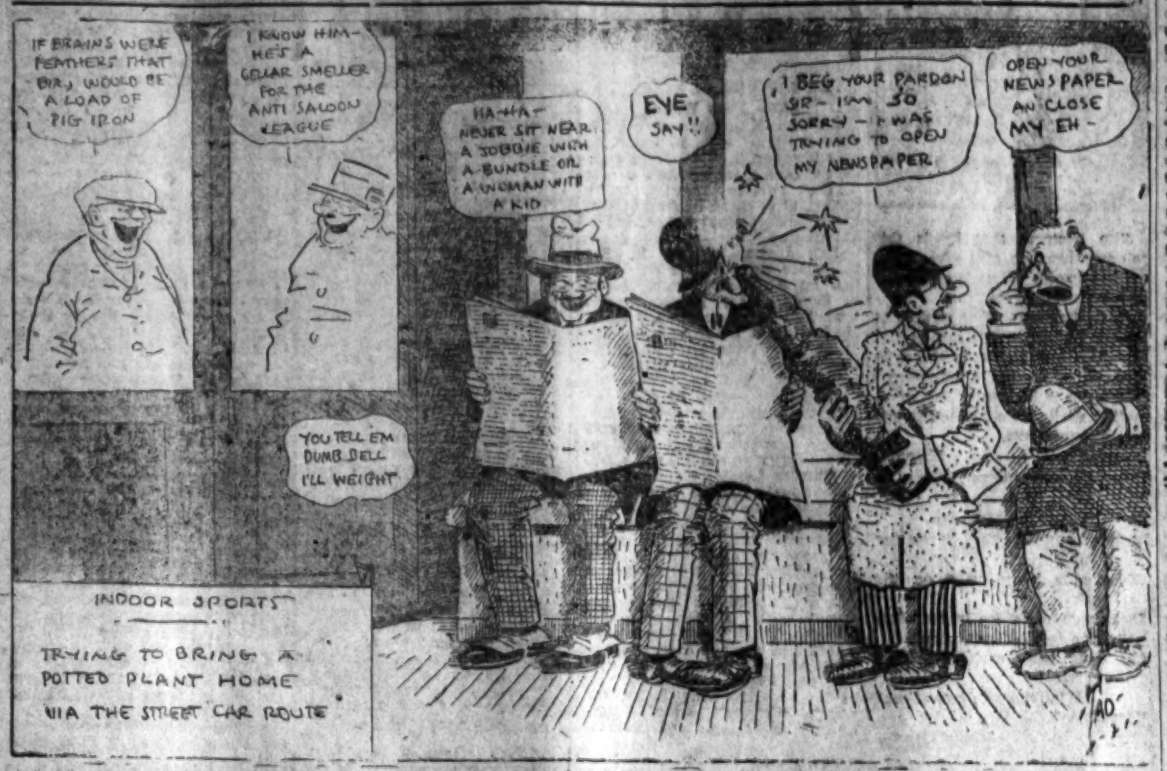
INDOOR SPORTS By Tad



I'll Be Satisfied With Second Place -:- By Ring W. Lardner

To the Editor:

They's only about a wk. before the big show opens out in old Chi and it looks to me like here was a good chance to slip my admirers a last word in regards to my plans and specifications and etc., as I notice my rivals is waisting a lot of valuable white paper along the same lines.

Well friends, everything up to date has gone to my satisfaction and a lot of people thought it was a body blow to me when Sen. Lodge was named to make the key note speech, but between you and I, the Sen. and myself has never had a cross word or any other kind and wile I don't approve of a man wearing those wiskers why still and all I have got to congratulate the G. O. P. for naming this old bird, as he is the only member of either party that can speak a sentence without winding it up with a preposition or a adverb. And as far as the key note is conserned, why if he gets off the pitch I will be there with the old tuning fork and set him right.

Now recently one of my rivals for the office of the president's chair name Hiram Johnson come out and said he wouldn't take 2d. place on the ticket or in other words run for vice president, and I want to make it clear to you boys and girls that I am not as much upstage as that and if I can't be nominated for the president's chair itself, why I will take the 2d. place or the show money, and wile I don't know nothing about vice, why still and all if I am nominated for the vice president I will take it and further and more, the man who is elected president over me would better watch his step because the first chance I get I will stick something in his coffee witch will make me president of the United States.

Now friends, as I said a wk. ago the primarys is not going to play any part in this convention, but I do think after reading the names of some of the delegates at large that a whole lot of them shouldn't ought to be at large, and I don't know what is the matter with the police, but if I was running things they would be locked up in some institution where they would get good care and proper medical treatments and may be by the time the next convention rolls around they would be fit to function. In the mean wile as long as the convention is going to be held in the summer time, they shouldn't ought to be left run loose without a muzzle.

Several of my friends has recently asked me what I would do if I got in the white house. Well, in the first place I will tear out the partition in the south rm. and put in a roulette table and have the whole place redecorated and only raise the rent 50 percent. Also they will be no excuse for the suffragists to picket outside of my place fense as I intend to keep open house. But not Colonel House.

Now admirers, they's only 2 candidates for this high office that knows anything about Chicago, myself and Gov. Lowden, and the latter hasn't opened his mouth to tell you where to go and where to not go. As far as his hospitality is concerned he might as well be President Wilson receiving the diplomats. In regards to myself I haven't been in old Chi since March but the boys tell me conditions is about the same as then and all as you half to do is call the house physician and he will give you a prescription provided you name what disease you got and you can send a bell hop out and get it filled anywheres for $3.50 a pt.

The Coliseum where the convention is going to be held at is located on Wabash Ave. and 15 st. and the best way to get there is to walk and when you get there you show your badge to the policemans at the door but they can't read so all as you half to do is knock them down and walk in and take any vacant seat and if it's like what it was in 1916, why the band will play appropriate music when you come in, like for inst. when W. J. Bryan entered the press box in 1916 they played rock of ages.

A great many of my friends has asked me how will they recognise me when I come into the convention hall. Well friends, I will be the most dignified bird in the press box and as I said last wk. I will probably be setting between W. J. Bryan and the highest paid short story writer in the world outside of myself and probably you have read lately about this story writer and their husband only meeting for breakfast twice per wk. but if I was married to a piano player he would be lucky if he seen me at breakfast I time a yr. let alone 2 times per wk., and in the second place, if I was marrying for music I would marry a player piano instead of a piano player.

Will Invite America To Brussels Parleys

Bourgeois Says Other Nations Outside The League Will Be Heard, Too

Paris, May 25.—Leon Bourgeois, President of the Executive Council of the League of Nations, said this afternoon that a special invitation would be sent to the Government of the United States to participate in the financial conference to be held in Brussels after the meeting at Spa of the allied and German chiefs of Government. M. Bourgeois explained that the invitations would be sent to the twenty-five members of the League of Nations and provision would be made for hearing from countries that were not members of the League. M. Bourgeois was charged at the Rome meeting of the League Council to prepare for the Brussels conference.

"Before the meeting takes place at Brussels," he said, "M. Gustave Ador, former Swiss President, who will preside, will acquaint each of the invited States with the decisions of the Allies with regard to questions of reparations and of war debts. All discussion would be sterile without a knowledge of these decisions. I have addressed to Mr. Lloyd George as President of the Supreme Council a request that he supply us with all possible information on these points as soon as possible. We await this information, which we will undoubtedly get after the Spa conference, before setting a positive date for the Brussels meeting.

"I believe it very important to insist upon this detail. We cannot meet before the allied Governments have spoken. We cannot plan any operation of international credit before the question of bases and guarantees has been settled. We cannot, and we do not wish to, substitute ourselves for the Governments in the institution of a financial policy with regard to Germany; but when this policy has been laid down, which is not yet the case, we have accepted the task of calling together not only our members but also other countries to seek means of remedying the distress and disorder from which all nations are suffering."

The Shanghai Police Seize Russian Ships

THE Shanghai Municipal Police yesterday took a hand in Russian politics. With nineteen motor cars and two motor trucks they charged down to the Yangtszepoo dock and took possession of three ships belonging to the Russian Volunteer Fleet, the Penza, the Simferopol and the Georgi. They ordered the crews off, loaded them into the motor cars and took them out to the French Concession. They did not put the men in jail but quartered them in Frenchtown. In place of the crews the local police put squads of Sikhs on the vessels.

The Municipal Police took this action at the behest of the Russian Consul General here, Mr. V. Grosse. What the result will be we cannot foretell, but among the possibilities is one that is rather alarming: it is this, that the Shanghai Municipal Council may eventually be called upon to foot a substantial bill.

The crews were taken off because of their refusal to obey any orders save those originating from the Provisional Government sitting in Vladivostok. The Russian Volunteer Fleet is half private and half government owned. It was operated by the Kerensky Government and when that was overthrown it was operated by the Siberian Government under Kolchak. The latter co-operated with Denikin, Korniloff, Judenitch and the other White Guard leaders in the attempt to conquer Bolshevism, but one by one they were all defeated and their armies dispersed and captured, Kolchak himself being captured and executed.

Later the Provisional Government was established in Vladivostok and it took charge of the Russian Volunteer Fleet, appointing its own management. Mr. Feodoroff the Russian Consul at Tsuruga, a former manager of the line, refused to recognise the Vladivostok Government, and Mr. Grosse here, took the same position.

The old management has been dispersed to the ends of the earth, the main surviving group, according to local representatives of the Vladivostok Provisional Government being located at present in Constantinople, and they add that Mr. Feodoroff is taking his orders from there and transmitting them to Mr. Grosse here.

The crews which were taken off of the ships yesterday say they will only take their orders from a Government that is functioning on Russian soil, and that the only government there in a position to function so far as they are concerned is the one in power at Vladivostok, their home port. They further assert that it is the intention of the Constantinople group operating through the Shanghai police to get possession of the ships and send them to Constantinople for chartering in the Black Sea. When we put this to Mr. Grosse his only reply was that "we may send them to Vladivostok."

Mr. Grosse represents no government and no faction in Russia. He says so himself. He claims to derive his authority from the Russian Minister at Peking, and Mr. Feodoroff claims his from the Russian Ambassador at Tokio. And these in turn represent no existing government in Russia.

Yet they can give orders to the Shanghai Municipal Police and see them promptly executed. They can seize ships in this harbor that belong to and are being operated by an existing and functioning Russian Government. They can do this because the existing governments in Russia have not been recognised by the Allies and so cannot appoint their own representatives here.

It is a situation that calls for remedy. If the Russian Consul General here who represents no government in Russia can order the local police to act and not only that, cause them to act, what sort of crisis are we likely to be forced into? Suppose he should begin ordering raids against Russians here who do represent existing government in Russia!

Allied stupidity with regard to Bolshevism, is, however, rapidly approaching the point where a "show-down" becomes inevitable. Unable to abandon their secret hostilities against the Bolshevists, they have produced a situation in Poland which is enough to break the heart of a stone image. They officered, organised and equipped the Polish army and dispatched it against the Bolshevists. They permitted it to step across the line that had been fixed by the Treaty of Versailles. They permitted a campaign of aggression which the Covenant of the League of Nations absolutely forbade.

Now the Polish army has been crumpled up by a great offensive organised by Brussiloff, and on a 720 mile front the Red armies are advancing. Who is to stop them? The Polish army can't do it. The Allies have now either to plead with the Bolshevists to cease their offensive or they have to organise armies to stop them. The first course is not palatable and the second is impossible.

Our local police force remains to be considered. But we do hope that Mr. Grosse won't order it to man the Russian Volunteer Fleet and sail away to the rescue of Poland.

Author Depicts Russia's Evils

Maurice Verstraete, author of "Mes Cahiers Russes" (My Russian Note Books), was French Consul at Moscow, commercial attache to the French Embassy and a director in a Russian bank up to the revolution. He has spent the greater part of his life in Russia and only got permission to leave it in 1919. The notes that he kept during the period of the Provisional Government and through the first steps of the Bolshevik domination were made daily and should constitute valuable material for the historian who comes to write the truth about Russia. His book, made up of these notes and an article depicting the evils of the old regime, has lately been published in Paris.

The author deals with Russia under the Tsars without mercy, and tells of a situation which could only lead to revolution. His opinion of Kerensky and his associates in the Provisional Government is probably a correct one, since he says they represented a real Russian psychology which has been everywhere accepted.

"Kerensky and his friends in the Provisional Government were men of talk, not of action. They were powerless—veritable idealogues, orating and agitating without the power of acting."

The puissance of effective action of the Bolshevik leaders made a striking contrast and shows their real force.

"The Social Revolution being their end they employed for its success the most dictatorial methods, killing all individual liberty. By concentrating all powers in their own hands they became the single power of the state. Their triumph is the tragedy of middle class civilisation."

Monsieur Verstraete does not believe in the ultimate triumph of Bolshevism. 'He thinks that the check of experience in the economic domain will cause its fall.

The Frenchman gives prominence to the name of Moses Ouritsky along with those of Lenin and Trotsky. In 1918, he says, Ouritsky became the tyrant of Petrograd, and his very name was pronounced with trembling. All arrests and executions were made in his name, and from morning to night he worked with zeal in his office. No. 2 Gorokhovaia, reading denunciations and signing death warrants. After the flight of the Ambassadors Verstraete was arrested and carried before Ouritsky, who threatened to have him shot, but he changed his mind and deported him. Ouritsky was assassinated on September 4, 1918, by a student named Kanngiesser, who was tortured in prison to make him tell the names of his accomplices. A like fate to his is predicted by the French Consul for Lenin.

While novel only in its methods, those of putting down daily experiences day by day, the book presents a vivid picture of the apparently hopeless condition of Russia up to the close of 1919.

The picture that heads this column seems to still give cause for guesswork. Here is one letter giving an interpretation.

Dear Domino: That pitcher at the top of your writin means that you hev bin kicked in the saim place as my teecher hit me wen i stuk a pin in his chair. My granmother sees we shuddent kick eny won not even-you.

Polo tomorrow. It is a great game with its chukkers; it's a fast game with its ponies; it's a brilliant game with its riders. It is a fashionable game with its colorful crowd of spectators. This is the impression the game gave a writer the first time he saw it played at Hurlingham.

"The game," so the program told me, "is very similar in its rules to football. There are seven periods, each of eight minutes play. Ponies are changed after each period."

These ponies fascinated me. To my eye they were super-human; they understood every move and what next to do; and they appeared to revel in the thrill and the amazing skill of it all. I now know why polo ponies cost so much. They can think instantly. Of the thrill, there can be no question. Polo has all the excitement of horse racing, all the breathlessness of football at its highest pitch.

There is scarcely time to follow it. At one moment half a dozen horses are thundering and snorting after the little white ball towards one of the goals; a moment later, a racing player gets in a marvellous backhanded hit while going at top speed and men and animals are left going full tilt in the opposite direction.

For myself, though I could not follow all the knowledgable interjections of my neighbors about "Riding off," "Following through" and "Keeping off" I did know one thing—I shall go to watch polo again. It is a joy in life.

Again the mother's voice sternly told him to go to sleep. "Go to sleep, if you call again I'll come up and smack you." Long pause this time. Then came the pathetic cry "Mother, when you came up to smack me bring me a glass of water; I'm so thirsty."

Dainty little Suzanne Lenglen, the youthful tennis champion, has again beaten Mrs. Lambert Chambers in the Wimbledon finals. La Belle France claims the ideal boxer and the ideal tennis player. But years ago when Henry V was on the English throne; when America had not been heard of; when Germany was only a part of the Holy Roman Empire—tennis was a popular game in France, and the Dauphin to add zipp to Henry's intentions sent him a case of tennis balls and told him to go back home and learn the game. Shakespeare puts these words into the monarch's reply:

"We are glad the Dauphin is so pleasant with us;
His present, and your pains we thank you for;
When we have matched our racquets to these balls
We will, in France, by God's grace play a set
That all the courts will be disturbed with chaces."

Americans As Observed By An Editor Of Punch

BY RUSSELL B. PORTER
(New York World)

An unusually interesting interview granted by E. B. Lucas, an associate editor of London Punch, describes his impressions during a first visit to America, which happened to come in the midst of our great National experiment in Prohibition.

Mr. Lucas arrived in San Francisco some five or six weeks ago on a journey which begun in London last November and took him to many strange lands. He has spent a fortnight in New Yerk, and at the time of the interview was planning to sail for home yesterday.

A prolific writer of whimsical humor, essays and critical articles, Mr. Lucas is best known in literary circles throughout the world as an authority on the life and works of Charles Lamb.

In appearance he resembles a cleancut American business man rather than an English gentleman of literary turn of mind. He is six feet tall and strongly built and carries himself with the air of a man who knows how to box. He is a youngish middle-aged man, with keen, prominent features, short black hair neatly parted and brushed back from the forehead, and trim, well kept clothes. There is nothing particularly English about his clothes, except his soft gray fedora. Neither in appearance, manner nor accent does he bear any resemblance to the "typical" Englishman familiar to many Americans. He talks easily and naturally. Were he to spend any great length of time in America he might say of himself that he wrote English and spoke American.

It is his convention that dissipates the impression that he has anything to do with business and shows his artistic bent. He has a gift of quiet humor and often talks in epigrams. Fond of a neatly turned phrase, he uses the critical scalpel even upon his own creative work. By nature a critic, but a tolerant one, he writes delicately with a pen and does not hammer on a typewriter.

TWO EVILS IN PROHIBITION

The interview began with a discussion of Prohibition.

"There are two things about Prohibition that are especially bad," said Mr. Lucas. "One is that it gives the whole nation an inclination toward duplicity, which in my opinion is worse than for a few men to be drunk once in a while. The other is that Prohibition deprives us of an index to the real character of men. In the old days when an employer did not know much about a man, his actions with regard to drink were an index to his worth. That test is disappearing.

"In this connection I recall that Walter Raleigh, the English professor, when asked to sign a round-robin presented by certain clerics to the University of Oxford asking that during the war and afterward the students should be forbidden to attend what are called 'wines,' refused on the ground that young men were not sent to Oxford to be protected, but to make a choice, which is the most important part of education.

"I do not think that England will ever go dry. Nor Scotland. Entirely apart from the ethical and moral phases, life in the British Isles without something to drink would be intolerable because of the climate. In California, where it is always sunny and one knows it will be sunny tomorrow, there is no particular reason to drink. But in England, where one cannot make engagements eight hours ahead because of the uncertainty of the weather and frustration of plans is constant, alcoholic comfort is a necessity.

EASY TO GET A DRINK

"I have not found it difficult to get a drink in America. The first stranger who suggested a drink was a hotel porter in San Francisco, who offered me a bottle of whiskey for $25. Since then a bell captain in a hotel has dangled the lure of whiskey at $15 a bottle; so I assume that the price is coming down. The second samaritan I met was a policeman in Chicago, who, thinking that I looked English and thirsty, volunteered to direct me to a place where I could buy liquor.

"In and around New York most of my alcoholic experience has been at private houses. I have not had so much success at public places, although at one restaurant of the better class we were allowed to place a bottle of whiskey, which had been brought by a provident friend, on the table quite openly. And this only a fortnight ago.

"I have also visited restaurants and cabarets where I have enjoyed excellent red wine served in tea pots, and good cocktails in coffee cups. Before I sail for England I expect to attend a dinner at a certain club, where plans have been made, I understand, for proper precautions against drought. But usually one can 'whet' only one's appetite."

During his visit Mr. Lucas attended a dinner given by a well-known Prohibitionist, at which the only libation was water and a drink composed of crushed oranges.

"At private homes," he said. "I always found that the host brings out something to drink, not only as an act of hospitality to the stranger within his gates, but also because he wants a drink himself. I have observed that when doing so they all make the same remark—that they lie awake nights worrying about what a blank life it will be when they come to the last bottle."

WHY NOT A COMPROMISE?

"If you know cases of promising men ruined by drink and homes degraded and impoverished by the corner saloon, as we all do, you cannot take any kind of a high line in talking about Prohibition. For the sake of saving others who cannot save themselves it may be necessary for those who know how to use alcohol to sacrifice their own tastes and pleasures. None the less, one would suppose that a compromise were wisest.

"I asked the policeman in Chicago what his opinion was as to the effect of Prohibiton on the drinking men and their families on his beat and he said that he had not observed any change in their condition.

"'Has there been any diminution of distress?' I asked him.

"'No,' he replied.

"'What are the drunkards doing?'

"'They're miserable; but their wives—at any rate, some of them—are happier.'

"'And what are they doing with their surplus money, now that whiskey doesn't take it?'

"'Oh, they're spending it on clothes and other foolishness,' was the way he put it."

NIGHT LIFE

Asked to compare the night life of New York and London, Mr. Lucas said:

"The streets of New York seem to me to be infinitely better kept with regard to women. They are full of happy people who seem to belong to each other, while in London the streets contain scores—even hundreds—of women on the prowl.

"Owing to our scarcity of coal we cannot permit any kind of trifling with electric lights, and the streets are comparatively dark. Sky signs such as I see on Broadway would be almost an act of national or social treachery in England. There used to be an illuminated revolving ball on top of the Coliseum, but it was against a by-law and had to be stopped. Nothing here would astonish the average Londoner so much as the Broadway sky signs."

Mr. Lucas said that he admired the beauty of the Woolworth Building always, but perhaps most as seen from the Hoboken side in the slanting sun.

"The whole of Lower Manhattan," he added, "in the evening light presents from the Hudson a beautiful appearance. It is the marriage of Commerce and Romance."

To an inquiry as to his impressions of a Presidential campaign Mr. Lucas replied:

"I don't understand them. I found people in California hot for Johnson, and people in the East with divided allegiance between Hoover and Wood. I found one man in Boston for Lowden. And I saw Senator Knox riding a horse at Valley Forge looking as careworn as if he were President already."

ART AND LITERATURE

"I like traveling in America," he continued. "It is a pleasure to be in a foreign land and understand the language. I don't say that Americans are the kindest and most generously hospitable people on earth, because I have not been everywhere, but I can't imagine any that are more so.

"Nothing has impressed me more than the treasure of culture—the unique products of European literature and art—that are preserved in America and are daily being added to. I have seen collections of pictures, books and manuscripts that bewildered by their range and richness. It has come to this, that no exhaustive critical monograph could be written by an Englishman or Frenchman on any of his country's greatest authors or painters without crossing the Atlantic.

"'Kipling's line, What do they know of England that only England know?' has been continually in my mind as I have wandered through your cities. I thought, for example, that Dr. Johnson was a typically English hero. I find that the finest collection of Johnsoniana is in Buffalo; and Philadelphia contains a Johnson "fan" who leaves the devotees of the Cheshire Cheese in Fleet Street miles behind, both in zeal and knowledge. Gradually all the original letters and manuscripts and first editions of Charles Lamb are coming to America. I spent some years of my life in studying Lamb and writing his life, but I now know—after visiting certain collections and hearing of others in this country—that I ought to do the work all over again. I used to think that to see the work of Claude Monet at its best it was necessary to go to France. Not a bit of it! The most exquisite Monets are here. The world has no such Rembrandt as Mr. Widener's landscape. "The Mill," at Philadelphia. And so on.

"I should not like to say that either in literature or in art America is doing better work today than England and Europe. I think it improbable that she is—although I think it probable that, some day soon, when she can forget Wall Street a little, she may. But I am convinced that in no country of the world is so much enthusiasm being displayed in the assemblage of the best work of England and Europe and in giving it honorable and fitting housing.

"One of the things that has most delighted me in America is the thoroughness and good taste displayed in the celebration of national heroes. I can think of nothing to excel the piety and proper pride with which Washington's home at Mount Vernon has been crystallised and maintained. The work now going on toward the restoration and preservation of the whole Valley Forge district is most admirable."

LIVING CHEAPER IN LONDON

Mr. Lucas said the cost of living is much higher here than in England, at least in comparison of today's New York prices with last November's London.

"A traveller on a letter of credit, like myself, has a very bad time in America, between the cost of living and the exchange situation. Yesterday I got only $3.89 for a pound, and $1 is worth to me rather less than 2 shillings in actual purchasing power, according to London standards.

"Clothing is much cheaper in London. The suit I have on was made to order by a West End tailor and cost me 14 guineas, with two pairs of trousers, and 10 percent off for cash. That was last September. Well, I am told that you would have to pay $150 for the same sort of thing in New York today—30 pounds at the old rate of exchange, and 40 at the present rate.

"Food is much dearer here. For example, in any patisserie you ask for French pastry and find eclairs 25 cents each, which means 12 pence for me. There is never anything like that in England. At most, eclairs would cost 6 pence.

'CANDY DAY AND NIGHT'

"Incidentally," he added, "what about the teeth of the country, now that Prohibition has driven so many people to candy? What do the dentists say? I never saw anything like the sweet shops over here. Candy day and night! Very costly chocolates in everybody's possession. I saw girl clerks coming out of a big office building by the hundred the other day and not a girl but was eating sweets—not a single girl!

"At the baseball game, however, peanuts seem to be the favorite food. I had not noticed the frankfurter sandwiches. I saw them eating big cornucopias with ice cream—ice cream cones. We don't do those things so much. There is no recognised food that goes with any of our sports. At the cricket match nobody eats. The match stops for tea, but only the players refresh themselves.

"You are becoming an eating Nation. It is almost impossible to meet any person whose jaws are not moving. Is it that you have so much to ruminate on?"

At the close of the interview, Mr. Lucas protested that the reporter's questions had caused him to talk too much, but that he wished to add that what he really wanted to talk about was "Mr. Pierpont Morgan's collection of autographs in that loveliest of little buildings."

Mr. Lucas left with his publishers the corrected manuscripts of two books. No doubt he will provide his English readers with his observations of American life. He prides himself on not being a lecturer and not taking any money away from America.

Whimsical Contrasts

E. V. Lucas's epigrammatic style, which is familiar to readers of London Punch, is illustrated by the following excerpts from the interview he gave The World contrasting American and English life:

"In America you are fond of business and proud of being business men, while in England we are bored of business and would prefer to be thought to obtain our money in other ways. I don't say which is right and which is wrong, but I am certain of this—that your attitude provides much more fun."

"In England if you ask a man how he is he gives you an account of his more recent maladies and this morning's temperature. In America he says 'Fine!'"

"In England a series of comic pictures in a newspaper would have to culminate in a point."

"In England the waiter brings you something at once, to go on with. In America he brings the meal all together, just as you begin to swoon from hunger."

"In England a policeman's baton is so rarely used that there is a chance to get away before he can find it and draw it. In America it swings at every corner, hungry for a head."

"In England a smoker is treated with more consideration than a non-smoker. In America, where England gets most of its tobacco, you are forbidden to smoke even in a stone railway hall bigger than the Hippodrome.

"In America the food is served with much more distinction. The cloths are clean, the cups are clean, and everybody gets a finger bowl. In England finger bowls belong to a certain class of restaurant; other people never hear of them.

"It is refreshing to be in a country where there are no class distinctions. I am told that there are class distinctions here, but I have not seen them. It is so nice to be called 'Mr. Lucas' immediately by every one. England is entirely full of 'Sirs' and hat-touching. Even the war has not done much to change conditions. It's in the English blood. The English like class distinctions and rank."

Artificial Leg 300 B. C.

The oldest artificial leg in existence is that in the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons of England. It was found in a tomb at Capua, and is, of course, of Roman origin.

This artificial member accurately represents the form of the human leg. It is made with pieces of thin bronze, fastened by bronzed nails to a wooden core. Two iron bars, having holes at their free ends, are attached to the upper extremity of the bronze; a quadrilateral piece of iron found near the position of the foot is thought to have given strength to it. There is no trace of the foot, and the wooden core had nearly crumbled away. The skeleton had its waist surrounded by a belt of sheet bronze edged with small rivets, probably used to fasten a leather lining. Three painted vases lay at the feet of the skeleton. The vases belong to a rather advanced period in the decline of art, about 300 B. C.

Bringing Up Father

Reveries Of A Retired Rounder :-: By Damon Runyon

In Which Mr. Mugg Shows How A Man's Life May Turn On A Very Little Thing

I am reading the other night how this guy Newton is laying out in an apple orchard one day and sees an apple fall off a tree, and how it starts him to figuring until he finds out what makes the apple fall.

So I get to thinking how little things may set guys to figuring, and finally switch their whole lives plumb around, and one reason why I think of such matters is because the same night I see an old friend of mine by the name of Butch Moses down Broadway, with everybody pointing him out and saying what a smart guy he is.

He is all dressed up and full of speed, and he is wearing diamonds as big as cocoanuts. Furthermore, he is high toneing one and all, including me, although I know him when he is there with nothing, and has no place to put it. I know him when he is considered the fat-headest guy in my old home town out West, and there are a very many fat-heads in my old home town, at that.

Now this Butch is a shippydehoy, which is a way of saying he is one of the lads, and he makes his living with various matters, such as taking advantage of suckers. Furthermore, he is considered one of the slickest and most successful guys in the business, but if it is not for a very little thing which puts him to figuring, the chances are Butch will still be back in my old home town out West as fat-headed as ever, instead of on Broadway with a reputation for being able to out-smart anybody.

This Butch and I are young squirts together back in my old home town, and in those days nobody ever figures him sense enough to pound sand in a rat hole. He is a very slow thinker, and he never has much to say because he never can think of anything worth saying, or if he does think of anything it is generally too late to say it.

In addition to that, this Butch is a very silly looking guy in many respects, so between his looks and one thing and another people naturally put him down as a born chump and treat him as such, and in those days a chump in my old home town is a very tough spot.

Well, by and by this Butch goes to work because he does not know of any other way to make a living, what with being so fat-headed, and what he goes to work at is the butcher racket. He gets himself a job in old man Schmidt's butcher shop and learns the butcher business, which is why he is called Butch Moses.

Well, for the next eight or ten years Butch goes along cutting up steaks and chops, and all such as that, for old man Schmidt, and selling them to people of my old home town, but he never gets any smarter. He is so fat-headed, he does not even get sense enough to give his old pals the shade of a pound or two when he is cutting meat for them, and as far as anybody can seen he never has a thought outside the business.

Finally old man Schmidt gets so he trusts this Butch to lock up the joint at night, and take care of any dough in the till, but even then Butch is no smarter, and everybody figures he will be in there sawing away at ham bones until he has whiskers down to his sox.

One day a circus comes to my old home town and sticks up it's tents on a vacant lot about a block away from old man Schmidt's butcher shop, and along toward evening a guy from the circus comes busting into the joint and wants to know if Butch will give him some silver money for greenbacks, because they need the change at the circus.

Well, as Butch is about to close up the joint anyway, and does not need the change himself he figures this is fair enough, so he gives the guy all the silver he has in the joint and takes the guy's bills. The guy goes on back to the circus and Butch thinks no more of it for awhile, being so slow about thinking anyway, until he counts up his cash drawer that night.

Then Butch discovers that the circus guy short changes him out of four bucks. He counts his bank roll over a couple of times when he discovers this, but it always turns out four bucks short. So Butch sits down and starts to think it over. He sits there all night and thinks, and he is still thinking when he opens up the next day.

He keeps thinking about it while he is cutting off twenty cents worth of porkchops for this Mrs. Hanrahan, whose old man is the yardmaster for the Santa Fe, and who is waiting at home for his breakfast, but before Butch finishes with the porkchops all of a sudden he hauls off and slams the cleaver at the meat block so hard it sticks in a foot.

Then Mrs. Hanrahan says, Butch Moses speaks out loud, but not as if he is speaking to anybody in particular but himself, and what Butch says is this:

"That is good enough for me," he says.

He turns around and chucks his white apron into a corner and puts on his coat and hat, and walks out, leaving the cleaver sticking in the meat block, and Mrs. Hanrahan waiting for her porkchops, and nobody ever sees him in my home town again.

Of course everybody figures Butch Moses goes nutty, but as far as anybody knows he never does a tap of work from that day to this, so he cannot be as nutty as people think. But what I am trying to get is the little thing which changes Butch's life.

If the circus guy does not short him out of his four bucks and get him to figuring the chances are Butch will still be back in my old home town cutting up meat, with nobody ever giving him a rumble because they figure him so fat-headed.

A True Savior

(A Story by Li Ging-biao, '21, Shanghai College)

In a town named Mei Su, about 20 li from Ningpo, there lived a young man of the name of S. S. Wang. Wang was fond of gambling so much that nothing seemed to him more interesting than to gamble. His daily work was to gamble. He strongly believed that it was of no use for him to work on his farm; it was the most pestilent little piece of ground in the whole country. Consequently, his field was always barren; his fences were continually falling to pieces; and his cow would either go astray or get among the cabbages. In spite of these conditions, he was still busy and interested in his gambling and he did not spend a minute of time to think of his future life.

Wang's wife was a good-natured woman, and, moreover, well qualified to run domestic affairs. She understood that her family would sooner or later be ruined, if her husband kept on gambling. So she kept continually dinning in her husband's ears about his gambling, and his future effect on him, her, and the family. Though her tongue was incessantly going on, yet every thing she said, no matter how strong, kind or true it was, did not affect him at all. His usual response was to shrug his shoulder to shake his head, or to cast up his eyes, after he had heard what his wife had said.

Time grew worse and worse with Wang as years of matrimony rolled on. His habit of gambling never slackened with his age and consequently he gambled away all his property. Now his fellow gamblers refuse to gamble with him since he had nothing to gamble with. At last he promised to give the winner his wife, if he lost the game. After an agreement was made, the game began. In less than two hours one of the gamblers had with perfect equanimity won the entire fortune. Wang became speechless and turned his steps homeward.

When Wang's wife saw her husband coming home, she immediately said to him: "We have got nothing in our home—no food nor money. Now I feel famished for want of my breakfast. I don't know whether you have got it or not—probably not, judging by your face. What shall we do?"

"You are no longer my wife," replied Wang, with his one hand rubbing his head.

"What! what do you mean," interrupted Mrs. Wang who was anxious to know the reason.

"Because I lost the game this morning and an agreement was made beforehand that if I lost the game, I should give my wife to the winner, unless I give him three hundred dollars. He will come to take you two hours later," continued Wang.

Mrs. Wang hearing this did not cry nor become sorry but said to him: "You have done good work and surely you will receive the immediate consequences. But anyhow I am not willing to be the wife of the gambler. I am rather willing to be the wife of F. K. Liu who lives not more than two li from here. Saying this, she immediately went to write a letter, closed it tightly and handed it to Wang saying, "Go quickly and deliver this letter to Mr. F. K. Liu for me." Wang went to do what his wife told him to do. After a while, Wang came back together with F. K. Liu. The gambler who came to take Mrs. Wang was already waiting for him. However, no sooner had the gambler begun to speak than F. K. Liu took out three hundred dollars. The gambler took the money and went away without speaking a single word. Liu then, went back with Mrs. Wang.

It was not more than ten days after that Wang had sold all his belongings. Consequently, he was little better than a beggar. Strange to say, he was rather comfortable with ragged clothes and insufficient food. But at last he felt it impossible to live any longer when he found that he had no money to gamble with. His relatives closed their doors quickly when they saw Wang come to their homes. His friends conversing earnestly together on the street ceased quickly when he approached, exchanged significant glances and went away as soon as possible without saying good morning, or good evening to him.

Wang was thus abandoned by his relatives and friends. At last he went to Liu's home and asked him to lend him some money. Liu seeing Wang's poor condition sympathised with him. Mrs. Liu who was originally Wang's wife became very angry, the moment she saw him. "We don't have such poor friends nor relatives. He is a beggar and we give some cash to him, that's all," said she loudly.

Wang was a man who did not fear scolding and most meekly endured her harsh words. Liu who sympathised very much with Wang as I have already observed gave him twenty dollars saying "Take this amount of money to run your business. Pray to gamble no more." Wang taking this amount of money went away without saying a single word, and seemed much ashamed. He was influenced by the moral atmosphere in Liu's home.

Wang decide to do some work when he left Liu's door. But strangely enough, as soon as he met the other idle personages and gamblers of the village, his will power was soon lost. He forgot all that Liu had said and all that he had decided to do. He entered into the dark place again. It was not more than six days after that he had gambled away the money he got from Liu.

Wang knew very well that it was hopeless to ask for help from his relatives or friends. "Except F. K. Liu, no one would give me any help. But . . . . " said Wang to himself and heaved a deep sigh. "But how can I make the skin on my face so thick that I may be brave encugh to enter Liu's house again. How I can receive from Liu the warm hearted warning and from his wife the harsh words," continued Wang. He shook his head mournfully but positively.

At last he decided to go again to Liu's home. When he approached Liu's house, dogs rushed forward and greeted him with loud barking; birds that are always happy were at this time singing mournfully and bitterly; the beautiful leaves of the trees seemed unwilling to expose themselves before him. In short, everything he saw had somewhat the idea of gloom and he felt sorry abandoned. When he entered Liu's home Liu seeing him, became very sorry, but Liu's wife was exceedingly angry, crying out loudly: "Are you so brave to enter this house again? It is far more possible for me to die than to allow you to stand before me." Saying this, she picked up a big stone and threw it toward Wang's head. Whether the stone hurt Wang's head or not is not a very important question; but an attitude like that cut him very deeply.

At first Wang could not endure it, but at last he said to himself "Nobody is to blame. I am to blame." Then Liu whose eyes were at this time filled with tears said to him in a low voice: "Mr. Wang, I don't know what I can do for you and what I shall say to you. You are old enough to appreciate the value of life and the way of living. Please take this fifteen dollars. I hope sincerely that I may never see such a poor, unlucky, and pitiful creature in this world again."

As soon as Liu had said these words, Wang took the money and went away without saying a word to thank him.

After two years when it was a beautiful morning, the singing of birds, the murmuring of streams, the breathing fragrance of spring, earth with its mantle of refreshing green, the heaven with its deep blue and its cloudly magnificance—all showed a new spirit and the beginning of a new life. When Liu and his wife were just taking their breakfast there came in two men. One of the two was well dressed and the other might be easily suspected to be the servant of the first. When Liu and his wife saw them they immediately recognised the well-dressed person and Liu went forward astonished and asked him: "Are you S. S. Wang? I haven't seen you for a long time. Tell me about yourself." "Without you I could never have had the present situation, never, never, never! After the second time I came to your home and you gave me fifteen dollars, then I immediately went to Shanghai where I started my new life. At first I got a position in a certain shop. Because I worked diligently and faithfully, I earned a great deal of money, and now I have opened a fairly big store by myself. My business is growing rapidly and I am so busy that I can't possibly find a minute to gamble," answered the man with a smiling and earnest face.

"Without me, not without Liu, you can never. . . . . " cried out loudly Liu's wife who could no longer keep silence. "Do you know who is this fellow?" continued she pointing to Mr. Liu who stood beside her. Saying this she immediately took off Liu's hat, gown, and other necessary things in order to show that Liu was a fairly old lady. "She is my aunt. Perhaps, you recognise her now. I arranged all this to cure you. It is the method which nobody has tried. I tried it and got this excellent result, that's all," said she happily. Hearing this, Wang rushed forward and caught her to his bosom—he folded his arms around her—he kissed her again and again—he could not speak, but the tears gushed into his eyes, and at last he cried out loudly: "You are my real supporter and savior!"

Friedrich Assails Allies In Speech

Opposes Ratification Of Treaty By Hungary—Says Allies' Sun Is Setting

Budapest, May 27.—Former Premier Stephan Friedrich, who was compelled to cut short his speech in denunciation of the Peace Treaty at yesterday's session of the Parliament, when his vehement remarks had created a scene, again voiced his opposition to the ratification of the peace pact at today's sitting, presenting a violent argument against the Allies. Herr Friedrich referred to the successful defiance of the allied powers by the Russian Bolsheviki and the Turks.

"The sun of the Allies is setting," he declared. "There is a new factor with which they must reckon. It is the indignation created by humiliated nations.

"The World War is still going on. There has been no demobilisation and all the defeated nations should reunite. After a few months the Apponyi delgation (Hungary's peace representatives), will regret signing the treaty. They were too meek. They say nobody listened to them at Neuilly. Then they should have returned home."

"Hungary committed three blunders. The first was to declare war, the second to go Bolshevist and the third to agree to sign the treaty. If we make peace with anybody it should be with the Serbs, Rumanians and Czechs. It is nonsence to expect anything from the Allies in Paris or London. We will get no revision from the League of Nations, which is another huge bluff. The role of the Allies is comic. Why, they even invited Bela Kun (the exiled former Communist dictator) to the Peace Conference.

"The whole National Assembly is dishonest. You sign the treaty, yet in the next breath say you are unwilling to fulfill its conditions. I warn you the day will come when the nation will call you to account."

The remarks of M. Friedrich, who represents the extreme national element, made the members of Parliament and the representatives of the Allies present uneasy. They also moved Count Apponyi to remark:

"Friedrich may be the National Assembly's bad boy. Just the same, the treaty is a rag of iniquity."

FEAR CZECH-POLISH BREAK

Clashes In Teschen Plebiscite Area Reach Acute Stage

Paris, May 26.—A rupture of diplomatic relations between Czecho-Slovakia and Poland is feared in official circles here as a result of the crisis over the situation in the Teschen plebiscite area.

The Poles are accusing the Czechs and the Czechs are accusing the Poles of responsibility for the repeated riots and multiplication of crimes in the Teschen district, as well as discrimination against their respective nationals.
